Now let us to the woodland hie, where longer lingers in, old burly winter's lap. In picnic garb we'll amble forth, and sit beneath the trees, and have our hides all chopped and backed, with stings of bumble bees. We'll gaily don our linen coats, and thin seersucker pants, and sit beside the gurgling stream, while o'er us crawl the ants. We'll swallow picnic lemonade, to moisten down our grub, which people make by sosking one cheap lemon in a tub. The guileless lemon we shall eat, devour the clammy pie, and sit on bowls of custard while a tear bedims our eye. We'll tip the mustard in the jam, the glee. Then let us to the picnic hie, cur basket in our hand, and homeward come filled up with woe, and leaves, and dust and sand.

It was a little past the hour when trees their verdure wrap, for spring no Father Time metamorphosed Saturday night into Sunday morning that Mr. P. D. Wyatt of West Weatherford street thought he heard a suspicious racket at a side door of his residence. The longer he listened the more he was convinced that some midnight prowler was trying to effect an entrance into his house. He rose from his couch with a firm determination and a sixshooter and proceeded to investigate. By this time the villain had changed his scene of operations and got round to the north side of the dwelling, where Mr. Wyatt encountered him. Whether might to show that we are filled with a bullet that he sent at the latruder at short range did strike blin, or whether the latter took Wyatt in his dishabille raiment for a ghost, caused the howl of anguish that split the air and woke up the neighbors for seven blocks around, is not known with precision.
